

Family based schemes

Written by Supreme Servant

In normal healthy people, compliance shows up after they have signed a voluntary contract (or there is an implicit contract) and their reputation in the community is at stake, ensuring contracts with it's members in the future. For the state no such contract is voluntarily entered by the tax slave, yet the same compliance can be obtained with a few tricks.

One of the cheapest way of getting compliance form the tax slaves is to bring them back to their infant state while emphasizing they ought to be happy they are free. To do this the government ought to disguise itself as parent.

The subject is born into a family by no choice of his own, like he is born in 'his' state by no choice of his own. In it's infant state the tax slave shows obedience, yet there was no preceding voluntary choice of his own. The natural authority of the parent over the child can be used to make him show obedience as an adult to the people claiming to act as a parent in the state.

All squeeze schemes are based in morality. For the family based scheme the moral command is 'obey whoever happen to be your parents, it's your fate. Obey whatever happens to be your country, it's your fate', no matter if it makes sense what they say or not. Eventually this will fail , since when your territory harbors all obedient automota, the productive base for you tax extraction will collapse.
